Sanatana Diamonds (STA – TSX Venture) is a highly promising diamond exploration company with significant grounds under claim and permit at its Mackenzie Diamond Project, 700 kilometres northwest of Yellowknife, NWT Canada.

Sanatana Diamonds stands out from its peers for the following reasons:

Significant area: Since 2004, Sanatana has explored almost 20 million acres and narrowed its focus to more than 6 million acres that are claimed and permitted and currently make up the Mackenzie Diamond Project. Included in this overall area are six separate, smaller areas that are thought to each represent a potential kimberlite field containing multiple kimberlite pipes.

Strong Partner: Sanatana's joint-venture partner in the Mackenzie Project is Kennecott Canada Exploration, a subsidiary of global mining giant Rio Tinto. Kennecott holds a 15% interest in the project and may earn up to a 60% interest by funding and developing projects to the point of a bankable feasibility study.

Sanatana has discovered diamond-bearing kimberlites: Sanatana discovered its first kimberlite, the "Dharma" kimberlite, on September 30, 2007. Testing revealed that the kimberlite was significantly "diamondiferous" and it yielded a relatively large 0.55ct stone. In April 2008, Sanatana announced that further drilling had intercepted a new kimberlite, "Dharma Uttar", adjacent and north of the original Dharma kimberlite. Both Dharmas are on the Greenhorn site, the first of six sites which contain strong indicators positive for diamond mineralization.

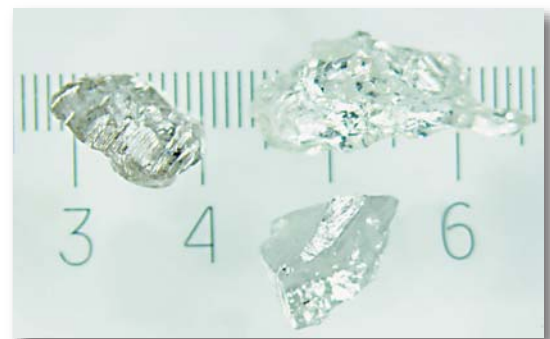

A note on "kimberlites" A kimberlite is a type of rock that sometimes contains diamonds. Kimberlites occur in the Earth's crust in vertical structures known as kimberlite pipes. Kimberlite pipes are the most important and common source of mined diamonds today. Generally, where one kimberlite is found, many others will be found.

Top Three Reasons to invest in Sanatana Diamonds

1. Sanatana has a team of proven mind finders, including Buddy Doyle, Sanatana's VP of Exploration, who led the Kennecott Exploration team that discovered the currently-producing Diavik /Aber Diamond Mine (NWT) and more than 100 kimberlites over a 12 year period.

2. Sanatana's joint-venture with Rio Tinto subsidiary, Kennecott, shifts the cost and risk of developing the project to another party with significant financial strength and provides access to the expertise and resources of a global mining leader.

3. Sanatana has proven that the first of six areas it has identified as having indicators positive for diamond mineralization is diamond-bearing. With each separate area thought to represent a potential kimberlite field containing multiple kimberlite pipes, the stage is set for a significant new play where Sanatana controls much of the prospective area.

Dharma Diamonds

The Bottom Line on Sanatana

Sanatana is a proven team of mine-finders, with significantly large and highly prospective grounds under claim and permit, all backed and supported by one of the most powerful mining companies in the world. Results from coming drill programs could start a new area play, similar to the Great Slave diamond rush, where Sanatana has explored and controls most of the area. Between 1993 and 1996, over $40 billion worth of diamonds were discovered in the Great Slave area.

Milestones

- September 2007
Discovery of Dharma kimberlite
- April 2008
Discovery of Dharma Uttar kimberlite
- August 2008
Commence drilling at Colville Lake project
- August 2008
Confirm results from Dharma Uttar
